

Yesterday's Tomorrow paintings by Meredith Hoffheins & Lumin Wakoa

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Contact: Caetlynn Booth, reservoirstudios659@gmail.com, cb@caetlynnbooth.com
Exhibition can be previewed: <https://www.reservoirstudios.nyc/conduit-gallery>

October 2021 – As the pandemic continues to morph, one thing is certain: it has flipped the way we used to do things on its head. It has been a time of change, of re-prioritization, a chance to confront one's fears and refocus on silver linings. In this time of upheaval, and in the context of creativity despite challenges on every level, Conduit Gallery at Reservoir Studios is excited to present "Yesterday's Tomorrow," a two-person exhibition of paintings by Meredith Hoffheins and Lumin Wakoa, in Ridgewood, Queens (659 Woodward Avenue, 11385) from October 1 – October 31, 2021.

"Yesterday's Tomorrow," speaks to the moment where our collective sense of time has changed so completely. Meredith's landscapes shift expectations with an uncanny quality, half real and half imagined, and Lumin's abstractions suggest expansive and microscopic perspectives in the same frame, a reflection on our understanding of our place in the larger scheme of things. Yesterday's tomorrow is today, and asks viewers to live in, and fully experience what these paintings have to offer in the present.

The exhibition can be seen by appointment (to plan your visit, contact: reservoirstudios659@gmail.com, cb@caetlynnbooth.com) In conjunction with the exhibition, an artist talk, and a closing reception will be held—see social media for details:

Instagram:

Conduit Gallery (@conduitgallery_nyc), Meredith Hoffheins (@meredithhoffheins), Lumin Wakoa (@luminw), Caetlynn Booth (@caetlynnbooth)

Images: Meredith Hoffheins, Gonfolon, oil on canvas, 12" x 17"; Lumin Wakoa, Flowers, oil on linen over panel, 18"x14"

###